TISOH graduates hit the hospitality industry

LAS VEGAS – Fall graduates from The International School of Hospitality (TISOH) are making their mark in the hospitality industry. TISOH specializes in practical, short-term training certificate and diploma programs for hospitality professionals pursuing career development and people seeking to enter the hospitality industry. Diploma graduates enjoy a 90 percent job placement rate.

Jordan Espinosa earned his TISOH executive diploma in hospitality operations with an emphasis in concierge in the fall. He has been hired at the Hilton Grand Vacations as a concierge. Prior to pursuing his diploma, Espinosa, a native of Las Vegas, worked in retail.

Leah Foster earned her TISOH executive diploma in hospitality operations with an emphasis in concierge in the fall. Foster moved to Las Vegas from Kentucky to pursue her dream of landing a job in hotel operations at a major resort. She recently was hired as a guest services agent for Caesars Palace.

Gina Gangemi earned her TISOH certificates in wedding coordination and design and in event design and production in the fall. Gangemi, who previously worked in the health care industry, was recently hired for event and wedding planning at Brit Bertino Event Excellence in Las Vegas.

Britt McManus Chapman earned her TISOH certificate in conference management and event planning in the fall. She was recently hired as the executive services administrator for Nevada Health Centers in Carson City, where she assists the board with administration and planning meetings and events. Prior to earning her certificate from TISOH, McManus Chapman worked as an office scheduler.

About The International School of Hospitality
